Re: Antibiotic content in Leroy Norwegian salmon and trout
Updated: January 1, 2023

This letter serves as certification that 100% of our farmed Norwegian salmon and trout that are sold contain no antibiotic content nor have ever been administered antibiotics at any stage in their lifecycle.

Our preventative measures and educated animal husbandry have improved overall fish health and have eliminated the need for antibiotic use in our operations.

In the future, should a disease occur and treatment be deemed necessary for the health of the salmon, all medicines will be administered under a veterinarian's care and the procedure will be well documented to ensure traceability. Those fish will be separated from all other Norwegian salmon and trout until the Norwegian Food Safety Authority clears them for market, and we guarantee that none of this product will be sold without express written approval.
